Valerie,

This is extremely useful.

We also work a 40 hour week in Neuchâtel, which according to my calculations represents around 1600 hours per year, (clearly the same as your calculations!). Like Wolf, however, I have been recommending that no-one should allocate all the available hours. In fact based on past experience we were working on a total availability for project work of 50%, i.e. 800h.

Thanks for your help - I think we are roughly on the right track then!

with kind regards,
Ruth

FYI - this is the response I received from INBIFO.

Hello Valerie,

I asked Wolf Reininghaus a few minutes before (independent from your message) about the same question. He decided to use 1600 h/year/person as a basis, but he said that we couldn't use the total time for project work. We will use for the two General Managers (W. Reininghaus, P. Terpstra): 400 h; for Executive Managers (H.-J. Haussmann, E.:Roemer): 800 h, and for all other project leaders: 1200 h.

Best regards,
Barbara

Dear Barbara,
Can you suggest to me what figure would represent a reasonable total number of available hours that an INBIFO project leader has in a given year for project work? E.g., 1700 hours, or a higher or lower number? I would like to have a reasonable figure to use for comparison of the resource allocations. I'd appreciate your thoughts.
